Let's Try It!

Pair up!

SOFT SKILLS: Conflict Resolution

Partner up. Then, for each scenario below, one person will play the role of a student or employee exercising the soft skill, Conflict Resolution, and the other will play the role of a peer or supervisor. Make sure each response is something you, personally, would be comfortable saying in the scenario. Based on your response, your partner will follow up with dialogue.

SCENARIO:

As a doctoral student in biology, you share lab and office space with other members of your advisor's group. You get along well with everyone, but there is one student who leaves his stuff all over the shared space, never throws away his coffee cups, and borrows supplies without returning them. You can't take it anymore. What is your approach with him?

SOFT SKILLS: Flexibility

Partner up. Then, for each scenario below, one person will play the role of a student or employee exercising the soft skill, Flexibility, and the other will play the role of a peer or supervisor. Make sure each response is something you, personally, would be comfortable saying in the scenario. Based on your response, your partner will follow up with dialogue.

SCENARIO:

Three weeks into your new office job, a colleague you barely know swings by your desk and says, "You know, we don't really have an 'official' start time to our work day, but I noticed you've been arriving between 9 and 9:30 each day. Given how new you are, I assume you should get here bright and early." Each day when you arrive, you notice about half of your colleagues are at their desks but half haven't arrived yet. What do you say?

SOFT SKILLS: Good Communication

Partner up. Then, for each scenario below, one person will play the role of a student or employee exercising the soft skill, Good Communication, and the other will play the role of a peer or supervisor. Make sure each response is something you, personally, would be comfortable saying in the scenario. Based on your response, your partner will follow up with dialogue.

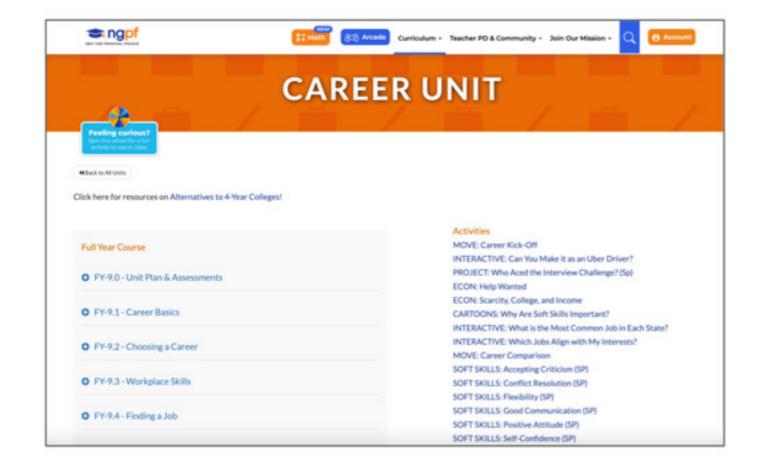

SCENARIO:

You decide to take an entry-level job doing data entry right out of college. The work is unrelated to your major, but you need to start paying off student loans. Though you don't love the work, you're quite good at it, but you find out that some coworkers are making $2 more per hour than you are. What do you say to your manager in order to get a raise?
